It's Good To Talk

Every weekend, I speak to my mum. This weekend was no different, particularly as it is her birthday this week. In dissecting our respective weeks, she made me aware of a programme that she had watched over the week (she watches loads!) that I wasn't aware of, but had had an impact on her through watching this.

The programme was "Roman Kemp: Our Silent Emergency", which was broadcast on the BBC last Tuesday, and as such, is available to watch and download on the iPlayer at <https://www.bbc.co.uk/iplayer/episode/p098hsv6/roman-kemp-our-silent-emergency>.

It centres around Roman Kemp, someone who I would normally only ever see enjoying life whilst making fun of TV programmes alongside his dad on Gogglebox, making a deeply personal and candid film exploring the mental health and suicide crisis affecting young men in the UK. This follows him losing one of his best friends last year and takes a close look at this urgent issue. It is both poignant whilst remaining upbeat in its desire to look at what can be done to encourage people to seek help, what preventative action could be taken and could help add to a dialogue that might help others. As you might expect, the programme contains some upsetting scenes, but can be viewed in a PG and non-PG manner from the iPlayer.

"IT'S GOOD TO TALK"

I mention this as a catalyst for conversation that we all need to continue to support, contact, message and look after each other. Whether you are metres away in the common room, or miles away in your respective homes, let's keep looking-out for one another and let's keep talking; and please include us where you feel you need us as a Sixth Form team!
