The Final Countdown

Before reading anything else, I think you need to pause, click on the link and give yourself a four minute and fifty-six second break: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9jK-NcRmVcw>

For our Year 13 students, the end is truly in sight, and the final countdown has begun to the final week of examinations for our A Level students and the big push for our BTEC students towards completing all of their remaining coursework to a level that will help them to meet or exceed their minimum expected target grade.

I am a fan of the following Nelson Mandela quote that, for me, distills the tangible feeling of everything associated with the 'judgement situation' of an exam or handing in a piece of coursework. It all looked so far away four weeks ago, but now we find ourselves almost out on the other side. The initial daunting prospect of the journey you needed to take is now becoming a reality. You CAN do this!!!

PERSIST

PUSH!

When running my 98th Parkrun last Saturday morning I was reminded of just how hard you sometimes need to work. One of the runners who overtook me (there were lots!) had a t shirt with the slogan 'PUSH' on the back. I could see there was smaller writing next to it and it forced me to speed up for a moment to read the acronym which stood for 'Persist Until Something Happens'. Again, this resonated me and as such, I knew that I would include it in this week's Sixth Sense.

Whether you are one of our superb Year 13s who have been preparing and preparing and preparing for their exams or a Year 12, independently taking charge of their learning and revision or indeed preparing for the start of their own journey in readying themselves for the UCAS Exhibition at the NEC on Tuesday 21st June, please keep 'pushing' - eventually, you WILL understand the concept, you WILL get the piece of coursework complete or you WILL feel the sense of massive sense of satisfaction from completing a great piece of work (and if you need further motivation, I refer you back to the link at the top of the page)!

Just a remind to you all that Monday 27th June is a Trust INSET day. None of you will be required to attend on this day. The Academy will reopen as normal on Tuesday 28th June at 8.30am for registration (this is a Week 2).
